Do You Know If Foundry Sand Was Placed on Your Property?

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency believes that foundry sand from the former Markey Bronze/Eagle-Picher facility on Van Buren Street in Delta may have been used as fill at several properties in and around Delta from the 1950s to the early 1980s. While in business, Delta used sand to create molds for its foundry manufacturing processes. The foundry sand may have become contaminated with high levels of lead and other metals. Last year EPA learned that some of the waste foundry sand was used as fill on residential properties.

Today, the waste foundry sand may appear to be black in color with a fine, granular texture. It could possibly be located at or near the surface or buried underneath a layer of soil. Contaminated foundry sand may pose a health risk if people, especially children, have direct contact with it. If you have reason to believe that foundry sand was placed on your property, please contact EPA as soon as possible.
